

John Walker (left) & Moka Davis, both of Lyon Real Estate

“I had nothing to do with the party. Not one damn bit. All I did was say yes. But this is great fun. Usually I know everybody at a party, but I don’t know everybody [here].

This is really a wonderful crowd, an amazing crowd. And everybody seems so happy to be here, which amazes me.”

Tower Records founder and party “host” Russ Solomon

KFBK host Kitty O’Neal (right) & Mary Daffin, owner of Ms. Mary

Noelle Ashland-Favour, owner of Noelle Ashland Skincare, with husband Jake Favour, creative director of Romp Creative

Buck Busfield, producing artistic director of Street Theatre, with Martina Kolokotronis, president of business operations for the Sacramento Kings

Interior designer Paulette Trainer takes the mic as John Packowski of PHA Architects and Tower Records founder Russ Solomon (right) share a laugh.

Sotiris Kolokotronis, owner of SKK Developments (left), with Chuck Trainor, senior partner at Trainor Fairbrook

Art of the Party

Home is where the art is, as Tower Records founder Russ Solomon hosts a house party for Sacramento’s Center for Contemporary Art

KCRA anchor Edie Lambert & Glenn Sorensen, president of Sutter Commercial Properties

Russ Solomon welcomes a guest into his and his wife Patti's home.

Susan McClatchy & artist Jerald Silva

Geoff Petrie, president of basketball operations for the Kings (left), and Kevin Sloat, principal and founder of Sloat Higgins Jensen & Associates

Tim Foster, editor of Midtown Monthly (left), and artist Chris Daubert

Gayle Govekar, staff director of the Senate Revenue and Taxation Committee, with Phillip Cunningham, attorney and board president for the Center for Contemporary Art, Sacramento

Jesse Powell, owner of Verge Gallery & Studio Project (center), and Blair Bonucelli, assets manager at David L. Bonucelli & Assoc., admire a painting by Roland Petersen.

Former Sacramento Mayor Burnett Miller